The trusted adult's phone number is:

Lucus visits Spencer at the mounted unit. It is morning and Spencer starts his day with a flake of hay. Hay is what Spencer eats for breakfast. Breakfast is very important for Spencer because he is not your average horse. Spencer is a Police horse.

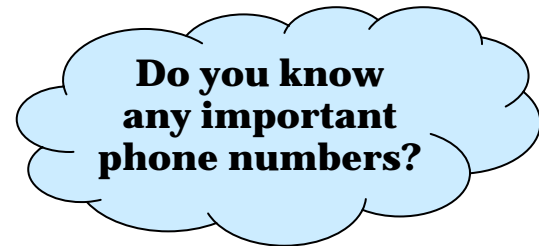

Lucas watches as Spencer starts his day by getting his hooves picked out. A hoof is a horse's foot and it is very important to check Spencer hooves every day. The Police Officer also checks to make sure that Spencer's shoes are on nice and tight.

Spencer has had a very long and exciting day.

The officer takes off Spencer's saddle, feeds him, gives him fresh water and now Spencer is ready to rest up for his next big day at work.

Lucas helps Spencer get all cleaned up for his big day ahead. He helps the Police Officer brush Spencer's back and comb his tail.

Spencer is now ready to go to work. The Police Officer places the blanket and saddle on Spencer's back.

Police horses also help look for lost people and children. Police horses can search large areas like parks and fields in half the time that a Police Officer on foot could.

Today Spencer has found Jaden, who was lost. Jaden is so happy to see them.

Spencer's primary function as a Police horse is crowd control. Spencer helps keep the peace by maintaining order in large crowds. Police horses get called to service for all demonstrations and protests. They also get called for sporting events and concerts.

Spencer goes on general patrol once he gets downtown. He walks up and down the street making sure that everything is ok.

Police horses like Spencer work both day and night. During the night Spencer wears yellow reflective bands on his legs called gators. Spencer also wears a red blinking light on the back of his saddle so that people and cars can see him.

Spencer works all year round.
He works during the cold winters...
the wet spring...
the hot summer and ...
the cool fall.
